in diameter and 100 feet deep. In the south half of this hole there is a great snow bank, extending from the very rim to the bottom. Beyond, and forming a part of the west wall of the lake, stands L'ao Crater, solemn, grim and grand, 228 feet perpendicular; still to the north stands Mt. Thielsen, the lightning rod of the Cascades. Just to the east of the lake is snow-covered Mt. Scott, while near our camp on the east is a high cliff, known as Cathedral Rock. To the south the scene is varied by a wide range of mountain tops, stretching far away to California, chief among which is snow-capped and beautiful Mt. Pitt. Just to the left the rough mountain view is changed to a charming plain, in the midst of which is a broad expanse of water, which proves to be Klamath Lake, about 30 miles away. After enjoying the transporting scene for a time, we concluded to find the trail and make the descent of the cliff to the water's edge. Taking our alpen stocks we ventured down the zig-zag trail, which consists of steps cut in the rock, "tacking" back and forth to make the descent as easy as possible. The distance down to the water at this point is nearly 2000 feet, vertical measurement. We saw a notice on the trail, reading, "At work on trail," and about two-thirds of the way down we came to pickers and drills of Messrs. Stubbs & Peterman, owners of the only two boats on the lake. They were improving the trail, hoping that more visitors to the lake would descend to the water, so they would get the usual "4 bits" to row each one to the island and back, which is cheap enough, considering that it takes 40 minutes to pull across. They will not rent their boats, but will row parties wherever they wish to go, at reasonable charges. Reaching the water in safety we were soon speeched over the deep blue water to the island. This beautiful sheet of water of an ultramarine blue, graduating into turquoise green at its edge, set in a mountain top and encircled by such stupendous cliffs, forms a picture, which, in grandeur and beauty, is rarely equaled and I am sure never surpassed. We landed at the south-east side of the island, and while our boatman with two boats waited, we climbed to the top. The cone is so steep and shelly that the ascent is very difficult. From the rim of this cone the beauty and majesty of the scene are indescribable. Ordinarily the water is very still and mirror-like, reflecting an inverted image of the surrounding cliffs in detail. But sometimes, when the wind blows hard it becomes, as our old boatman expressed it, "middy-lumpy." Passing to the left we walk around the rim of this crater, passing now and then to roll great rocks down the precipitous sides, watching them bound and crash down to the water. On the east side the crater we found the record book of the Mazamas which we examined and then wrote the record of our trip. Passing around to the south, or where we started, we one by one slid down the snow bank some 200 or 250 feet, and stood in the bottom of what was the last smoking chimney of a once mighty volcano. Professor Winchell says that Oregon, Washington, California and Nevada, constitute the greatest volcanic region in the world, and that Oregon is almost wholly volcanic. Now if the Pacific coast is the greatest volcanic region in the world, and Oregon is the greatest volcanic region in the world, it follows that this wonderful lake is the mouth of the largest volcano in the world. If you can, just imagine a vast mountain, 5 by 7 miles through at an elevation of 8000 feet, with top removed and the inside hollowed out to a depth of more than 4000 feet with perpendicular sides and filled full of the clearest, purest water in the world; then place a round island in one end 845 feet high, then dig a circular hole tapering to the center, like a tunnel, 100 feet deep and 475 feet in diameter, and you have a representation of this most remarkable lake in the world. What an immense mountain it must have been, ages upon ages ago, when long before the hot breath of a volcano soiled its hoary head, standing as a proud monarch, with its feet upon the earth and its head in the heavens, it towered far above the mountain ranges, and looked far down upon the snowy peaks of Hood and Shasta, and snuffed the air far beyond the reach of Mt. Everest. Carrying the slope on up at the usual angle of the snow mountain to the apex, it must have been a peak, from 20,000 to 25,000 feet high. Then streams of fire began to shoot forth, and great seas of lava were hurled upon the earth. At last the very foundation gave way and sank forever from sight, leaving a great, black, smoking chasm, which succeeding ages filled with pure, fresh water, giving to our day and generation one of the most beautiful lakes within the vision of man.

Leaving Crater Lake we next went to old Ft. Klamath, where Capt. Jack, Boston Charley, Black Jim and Old Scotchman, chiefs in the Modoc outbreak, in which General Canby was murdered, were hung on Oct. 3rd, 1873. At Ft. Klamath we got our mail which brought the sad news of the death of Professor McClure, of the State University at Eugene. Professor McClure was killed on Cowitz Glacier, Mt. Rainier, July 29, at 11 o'clock at night, by slipping and falling 300 feet, striking on a moraine of rock and bounding 40 feet. This saddened me greatly, as Professor was a personal friend of mine. To tell of these old buildings, of the Klamath Indiana agency, and the remainder of our trip, I must write another article.

Respectfully,
J. T. ABBETT.

Ravages of Disease Drove Arthur Davis Crazy and He Attempted Suicide.

WAS ORDERED TO AN ASYLUM.

Saved by a Miracle in the Nick of Time—Completely Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People—Affidavits from His Family Physician, County Medical Examiner and the Judge of the Court—A Reputable Physician Pronounces Him in Perfect Health, Physically and Mentally.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Indiana.

It is doubtful if the annals of medical science have ever recorded an experience more remarkable than that of Mr. Arthur Davis, the proprietor of a sawmill in New Pennington, Indiana. It is certain that the scientists of today have no knowledge of a parallel case. Mr. Davis was attacked with a nervous disorder, the tortures of which found their way into his mind, and he was appointed who pronounced him insane and he was condemned to an asylum by the mandate of the court.

"The neighbors were called in" he continued, "and I was considered dangerous. An illness of insanity was held. I was ordered put in an asylum. They were getting ready to take me when my nearest neighbor, Mr. Sefton, flung up an attempt to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He brought a box over (he always keeps them for use in his family) and I began taking them. This was the first week last November, and I was to be taken away next Wednesday. But I never went, for when Wednesday came my health was so much improved that it was decided to wait a few days longer before taking me. I continued taking the pills strictly according to directions, and my condition kept improving. I found that a whole pill in my weaker condition was too strong for me, so I took but half a pill after each meal, then increased the dose to a whole pill three times a day. The dose was finally increased to three pills. I took the last dose about the middle of the month, and I have been feeling ever since. I am perfectly well now, in mind and body. My hearing and sight are entirely restored. I sleep and eat well, and do not hear imaginary noises. I weighed 141 pounds when I commenced taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and now I weigh 184. I am as stout as before and am working hard every day in my mill.

MR. ARTHUR DAVIS.

His recovery marks one of the greatest victories ever achieved by the science of medicine, and dates the beginning of a new era in the treatment of disease.

A New Era reporter who visited New Pennington for the purpose of investigating the case was greatly surprised at the energy exhibited by Mr. Davis and the entire absence of any trace of ill health or mental derangement.

"No," said Mr. Davis in answer to the astonishment expressed by the reporter, "to look at me now you would not judge that I have undergone such a remarkable experience. I shall not have been married seventeen years and our home is made happy by four children. I had enjoyed good health until about two years ago, for some cause, I noticed that I was getting weak and could not endure hard work. I put me on an exclusive diet, and my nervous prostration resulted and I became rapidly weaker. My system was out of condition, my blood impure, my complexion sallow, and I could neither sleep or eat. My eyes became affected, likewise my hearing. I rapidly became worse. It soon developed that my mind was becoming affected. I would hear and see imaginary things, and my head was continually in an aching pain. When I could sleep I was troubled with fearful dreams.

"Existence was full of misery, and I seldom knew what I was doing. I was so miserable, that one day, in the midst of my suffering, I attempted to take my life. I tried, but the revolver was knocked down by my wife, and the ball went into the wall instead of my head. Mr. Davis exhibited the wound where the ball entered and emerged. He had attempted to put the ball in his heart.

NEWPOINT, Ind., May 1, 1897.

I hereby give my oath that the above is a correct statement of the facts regarding my illness and subsequent recovery.

(Signed) ARTHUR DAVIS.

"Did I try and attempt to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I am sure that I owe my life to them."

Mr. Davis' statement is too fully verified to admit of a shadow of doubt as is evidenced by the following affidavits:

After obtaining the affidavits of Mr. and Mrs. Davis the reporter decided to have a physician who knew nothing of the case examine Mr. Davis' present condition and in that way obtain the report of a disinterested person.

He was directed to consult R. G. Lane, M. D., of Newport, a successful doctor, and widely known for his reliability and care in making a diagnosis. The following statement is the result of the examination made by Dr. Lane.

NEWPOINT, Ind., May 7, 1897.
